

For my immersive interface device, I have chosen to create a bucket that is filled with a liquid that allows the user to experience temperature differences very rapidly to simulate touching various objects such as human skin or a cold drink. Here is a sketch:

